I have been spending a lot of time with my family and away from my computer and it seems that I am either busy or have something on my mind which may well lead to me forgetting to post a card. So, this is my first post and a card that I made for another blog and forgot to post! Thank goodness for the internet so I can post. Since I was very young I have been interested in the symbolism of numbers and letters. As a child I was very interested in numerology and very often studied the meaning of numbers. Numbers are meaningful and provide much information. For example the number 6 represents energy, action and progress. The number 4 is a very special number. 4 represents the cycle of life, for example 4,000 years in one day equals 24 hours in a day (4 x 24) and every 4th day is a new day. It also represents the cycle of life with regards to the 4 stages in the journey through life which are youth, adult, old and end. It also represents the 4 elements of earth, air, fire and water. The number 6 has a very special meaning. It represents transformation, growth, balance and harmony. 6 plus the number 1 equals 7 which is the number of success, abundance and 1d6a3396d6
