Norma Din 5461 Pdf 281

Pollione and Flavio are able to escape. When Flavio questions Pollione, the latter says that he's had a vision in which he and Norma have plans to kill their sons. She knows he's planning to leave her, but he can't imagine what the future will look like. Meanwhile, the Druids of the island have fought off the Romans. Pollione sees Frith and Uther, fleeing on horseback with armed Druids behind them. Suddenly, Uther is struck in the back by the fierce Norma, who stabs him and then draws the knife across his throat. It's clear that she'll make no distinction between Roman and druid, killing both without any hesitation. Norma and her troops throw themselves at the walls of the Roman camp, and the Gauls swarm into the camp. So far, it's a stalemate. The Romans plan to blow up a part of the base of one of the nearby hills, hoping that the resultant explosion will destroy the Gauls as well. Pollione arrives and learns about the plan. He's enraged, and agrees to come with Norma's troops to prevent it, and to elope with her to Paris. The Roman and Celtic warriors join forces to defend the hillside as the rest of the Druids join the battle. Adalgisa rushes back to Pollione and tells him she can't elope with him. She still loves him. He threatens to have her killed, and she promises that she'll leave Rome to be with him. Norma comes upon them. Norma and Pollione hurry to the Roman camp to join the others, leaving Adalgisa in the sacred forest.

Ascolta a la camera di Pollione, Pollione is singing as the ceiling collapses, burying him under dirt and debris. 5ec8ef588b
